THE UNIVERSAL DIRECTOR; OR, THE
NOBLEMAN and GENTLEMAN'S
TRUE GUIDE TO THE
MASTERS and PROFESSORS
OF THE LIBERAL and POLITE ARTS and SCIENCES; AND OF THE
MECHANIC ARTS, MANUFACTURES, and TRADES, Established in LONDON and WESTMINSTER,
and their Environs.

In THREE PARTS.

PART I. Contains, in Alphabetical Order, the Names, Titles, and Places of Abode of the Masters and Professors of the Liberal and Polite Arts and Sciences, viz. Painting, Architecture, Sculpture, Drawing, Modelling, Engraving, &c. To these are annexed, in the same Order, the Masters of Music; and the Gentlemen of the Physical Profession, distinguishing particularly those that Teach and Practise Midwifery and Surgery.

PART II. Contains an Account of the Mechanic Arts and Manufactures, ranged in Alphabetical Order; with the Names and Places of Abode of the Artificers and Manufacturers, residing in London and Westminster, and their Environs.

PART III. Consists of separate Alphabetical Lists of the Merchants, Bankers, Agents, Attornies, Auctioneers, Brokers, and Notaries; and of the most eminent Warehousemen and Shopkeepers of the Cities of London and Westminster.

To which is added,

A DISTINCT LIST of the BOOKSELLERS,
Distinguishing the particular Branches of their Trade.

P R E F A C E.

THE cultivation of the polite arts is justly deemed an object of the highest importance in every well-regulated state; for it is universally allowed, that in proportion as these are encouraged or discountenanced, the manners of the people are civilized and improved, or degenerate into brutal ferocity, and savage moroseness.

At length, fully convinced of the truth of this maxim, we begin to adopt it with becoming ardour, and even amidst the vigorous operations of a glorious and extensive war, a generous protection has been afforded to the fine Arts, which are daily making considerable advances towards perfection, and yield us the pleasing prospect of seeing England become one day, what Italy has been, the nursery of admired Artists.

As we have already carried the fame of our Arms to the most distant shores, and convinced the astonished world of our importance, as a warlike and commercial people, so we hope to be found no less capable of distinguishing ourselves, by a noble and generous attachment to the milder arts of Peace. Under the sanction of a Monarch who is both a judge and a liberal rewarder of genius; and the patronage and munificence of a free and independent Society instituted for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce, it is not to be doubted, that our Artists will produce such performances as will transmit their names to posterity with the same lustre as those of foreign masters have been handed down to us; and thereby remove that most popular and too well received prejudice, by which we have been taught to acknowledge none but foreign merit, and to suffer our admiration of exotic works to rise almost to adoration. After ascribing all due praise to the productions of the most famous foreign schools, let it be remembered that heaven has bountifully bestowed the same talents on our countrymen, as on Flemings and Italians, and has furnished them with nearly the same opportunities of improving them. We have an Academy of Painting and Sculpture, which for many years has been supported by the voluntary subscriptions of some of our ablest masters*, where youths are admitted to draw after Nature.

His Grace the Duke of Richmond, animated with an ardent desire to promote the improvement of polite Arts, has generously thrown open his curious gallery of Casts from the ancient Statues; where every artist, on making proper application†, is permitted to draw from these remains of ancient Art, and thereby to acquire that taste and judgment, for which his situation in life may not allow him to travel; and lastly, through the liberality of the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, &c. whose premiums are extended to the first stage of adolescence, Drawing Schools, which were almost unknown to our ancestors, meet with due encouragement; and parents in the middle rank of life, whose circumstances are

* The terms prescribed the young students of this academy may be known by applying to Mr. Moser. Vid. p. 19. Part I.

† The gentlemen proper to apply to for information on this head are Mr. Cipriani, vid. p. 8. Part I. and Mr. Wilton, vid. p. 29. Part I.

rather

rather confined, have the pleasure of seeing a path opened, by which their children may gain a comfortable subsistence, without that expence which is required to settle them with credit in trade: and here let me observe, that almost all the premiums offered by the Society under the head of Polite Arts, seem evidently designed to answer this benevolent intention; for they chiefly respect the rising generation of artists: those therefore, who imagine that they are calculated to engage the attention of artists of the first rank, whose reputations have been long established on the firm basis of distinguished merit, labour under a great mistake, for some of our ablest masters have never appeared as candidates for any premiums whatever, it being in fact their proper province to adjudge, rather than to receive the prize, offered to expanding genius.

The only exceptions to this general observation are, the two first premiums for Statues in Marble, and the premium for Historical Painting.

Amidst the extensive encouragement at present given to the works of art in general, I apprehended there was a deficiency which lay within the compass of my poor abilities to supply: If such, said I, is the present benevolent disposition of my countrymen, that merit needs only to be known, to meet with its due reward, surely it is necessary to establish a free intercourse between the artist and his patron: especially as it is a fact too notorious, that several picture-dealers, and shopkeepers of various kinds, have long engrossed the works of our artists, and have thereby had it in their power to keep many deserving men in obscurity for years, while they have been raising estates from their ingenuity

ingenuity and labour: our public exhibitions have, in some measure, removed this inconvenience; but for want of an accurate description of the peculiar branch professed by each artist, and a proper direction to their places of abode, the nobility and gentry are still at a loss how to apply to them. To supply this defect, the following work is offered to the Public, by means of which the patrons of merit will have an opportunity of visiting the artists of this metropolis, and of employing them in their several departments, instead of applying to those general undertakers, who engage to furnish a gentleman with a picture, or any other curious performance, at an exorbitant price; which they deliver wretchedly executed, either because they have privately employed an inferior artist, or have given a man of great abilities such a miserable price, that he could not afford it that time and attention which is required to complete a finished piece. In order to avoid all partiality, a strict alphabetical order is preserved throughout our whole work; and in the List of the Polite Artists, the names of those who are reputed the greatest masters are not distinguished from the rest, except where their performances have been of a public nature, or have been honoured with peculiar rewards; which are particularized rather with a view to record facts, than to draw conclusions concerning the merits of the works themselves.

The list of the Professors of Music contains a variety of masters in the different branches of that science; and as a knowledge of music constitutes one part of polite education, it is hoped it will prove in that respect an acceptable guide to the public. With respect to the professors of Medicine, cine, it must be observed, that hitherto no general account of them has been published; the College List is indeed in print, but no mention is any where made of those who are not so happy as to be members of that respectable body; nor did I ever see any account of the Surgeons publicly circulated, though they are so numerous and useful a body: these, with the Apothecaries, conclude the first part of my design.

The same reasons that induced me to compile a List of the Polite Artists, engaged me to extend my plan to the Mechanic Arts and Manufactures, which I have ranged in alphabetical order, in the second part of my work, and have subjoined the names and places of abode of the principal masters and manufacturers in each branch; so that a merchant, having an immediate commission for any piece of mechanism, or any manufacture, may readily apply to the real makers, and be enabled to execute his commission on the best terms.

In the execution of this part of my work, I found it impossible to procure the names and directions of every individual mechanic artist, and manufacturer, notwithstanding my repeated advertisements for that purpose; but by personal application, I have obtained such a variety in each class, that the merchant, the gentleman, and the country shopkeeper, will be at no loss where to apply, when they are either disengaged from, or unacquainted with any particular manufacturer or mechanic.

To illustrate the utility of this part of my plan, I shall suppose a general merchant receives a commission from abroad, or a country-dealer has occasion for a parcel of HATS or PINS, &c. and is not particularly acquainted with

with any maker, by referring to the Titles—HAT-MAKERS, or PIN-MAKERS, they will find the names and places of abode of the most considerable makers in London, which without this assistance they might seek in vain, or most probably apply to the retailer, instead of the maker.

The third part of the Universal Director contains a distinct List of the Merchants; for the particular utility of which, to avoid repetition, I refer the reader to the Introduction, Part III. p. 1. as the Bankers, Agents, Attornies, Auctioneers, Brokers, and Notaries, are all in some measure connected with, and dependant on the Merchants, I have given separate lists of each; and a general catalogue of Warehousemen and Shopkeepers; to which is added a List of the Booksellers.—On the whole, I hope I have formed such a complete guide for the public in general, that no native or foreigner can possibly be at a loss, or make an improper application for any of the works of Art or of the Manufactures carried on in this great and opulent city.

CANOT, Peter Charles, Landscape Engraver, remarkable also for Sea Pieces. Little Chapel-street, Soho.

Carpenter, Aaron, Seal Engraver in Steel and Silver. At Mr. Perry's, near the Opera-house, in the Haymarket.

Carter, Benjamin, Statuary. Hyde-park Corner.

Carwardine, Mrs. Miniature Painter. Rathbone-place, Soho.

Cassali, the Chevalier, History Painter. Garrard-street, Soho. This Gentleman has obtained two of the capital Premiums of one hundred guineas, offered by the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce, for the best Historical Paintings, from subjects in the British History: the subject of his first piece was "The Assassination of Edward the Martyr;" and his second, "King Stephen brought Prisoner before the Empress Matilda."

Catton, Charles, Coach Painter. Near Newcastle-house, Lincoln's-inn-fields. It is necessary to observe, that the term Coach Painter is confined in this part of our work, to those Artists alone, who paint History, Landscapes, Figures, and Flowers, on State and other Coaches, which are often executed in as masterly a manner as any other Paintings.

Chambers, Thomas, Engraver. The Corner of Compton-street, in Greek-street, Soho.

Chambers,

of ARTS and SCIENCES. 7

Chambers, William, Esq. Architect to his Majesty and the Princess Dowager of Wales, Member of the Imperial Academy of Polite Arts at Florence, and of the Royal Academy of Architecture at Paris, Author of "A Treatise on Civil Architecture," and of "Remarks on the Buildings and Gardens of the Chinese." Poland-street, Soho.

Chambers, Robert, Sculptor and Stainer in Marble. At Mr. Kilby's, in High Holborn, near Broad St. Giles's. This ingenious Artist stains various Colours, Ornaments, and Emblematical Devices in Marble; and copies therein Mosaic Work, or ancient Tessellation, in their proper Colours: he likewise draws Designs in Architecture: in Sculpture he executes Ionic, Corinthian, and Composite Capitals; and he performs Inscriptions on Monuments, Tombs, &c. in a manner which renders them more durable than the method now in use. His art of staining Marble for Tables, Chimney-pieces, &c. has been approved of by the Royal Society, the Society of Antiquarians, and the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce; the latter of which accompanied their approbation with a premium.

after Nature; this work contains one hundred and ten Copper Plates: to which the author has since added, by way of supplement, "The Gleanings of Natural History," containing fifty Prints, coloured also from Life. In the year 1750, the President and Council of the Royal Society, in testimony of their approbation of this elegant work, honoured Mr. Edwards with a Gold Medal. The original Drawings, and many of the natural subjects, may be seen by applying to the Author, at the College of Physicians, in Warwick-lane, Newgate-street.

FABIAN, John, Enamel and Miniature Painter. At Mr. Tacet's, in Meard's-court, Dean-street, Soho.

Ferguson, James, Astronomer and Private Teacher of Natural Philosophy. Little Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square. This Gentleman has for some time distinguished himself by reading Lectures on the following heads of Natural Philosophy, viz. MECHANICS, HYDROSTATICS, PNEUMATICS, SPHERICS, and ASTRONOMY; in the course of these Lectures every subject treated on, is experimentally explained, by proper Models, Machines, &c. of his own invention.

Finney, Samuel, Enamel and Miniature Painter. On the South Side of Leicester-square.

Haworth, Samuel, Carver and Gilder. Denmark-street, St. Giles's.

Hayman, Francis, History and Portrait Painter. St. Martin's-lane, opposite May's-buildings.

This ingenious Gentleman has given many public specimens of his great abilities, particularly in decorating Vauxhall Gardens with a collection of Historical and Comic Paintings; but the most recent and interesting performances, to every lover of his country, are, the two Historical Pieces relative to the present war, the first, representing the Surrender of Montreal to General Amherst, and the second the Defeat of the French Fleet by Sir Edward Hawke, in 1759. The particulars of the Designs of these admired pieces are too copious to be allowed a place here; it is sufficient to say, that they are at once standing monuments of the Glory of Great Britain, and of the Excellence of the Painter.

Hayward, Richard, Statuary. Near Dover-street, Piccadilly.

Hennekin,

14 MASTERS and PROFESSORS

Hennekin, Simon, Carver and Gilder. Edward-street, near Broad-street, Golden-square. This Artist is eminent for making laymen for Painters, &c.

Hill, James, Statuary. Durham-yard, in the Strand.

Hobson, Joseph, Coach Carver. Long-acre.

Hogarth, William, Esq. Serjeant Painter to his Majesty, and Author of "The Analysis of Beauty." Leicester-square. Though few are strangers to the reputation this Artist has acquired, yet as many are unacquainted with the variety and extent of his works, I hope it will not be thought foreign to my purpose to insert a List of his Historical, Instructive, and Humorous Prints, in the order they were published.

Pars, Henry and William, Drawing Masters, at their Drawing-school, near Beauford-buildings, in the Strand. This school was established by Mr. William Shipley, in the year 1755, on a plan calculated to render Youths of genius useful to the public, by qualifying them for,
and introducing them to, the service of the masters of the several Arts and Manufactures, in which Elegance of Taste and Correctness of Drawing are required; and accordingly, several masters have, from time to time, been supplied from hence with boys, whose talents were adapted to the Improvement of such Arts and Manufactures. The youths of this school have, every year, given remarkable proofs of their abilities, by obtaining many of the premiums for Drawings, offered by the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce. The original plan is still pursued, but has been greatly extended by the above-mentioned Gentlemen.

N. B. In this List care has been taken to insert only the Masters and Professors of Music residing in London and its environs, and such as actually teach; it being of little importance to the Public to know the residence of those who have retired from business: some few are likewise omitted, because the Compiler could not, with any certainty, ascertain their Address: but, on the whole, the List is so complete as to furnish a Variety of able Masters, in every part of this ancient Science; and, where it could be done with propriety, the particular Branch each Master professes to teach, is annexed to his name.

Some apology may be thought necessary for giving the following Catalogue a place in this part of our work; my reason for taking this step is, that the Apothecaries of the present age differ widely from those of the last. It was formerly the custom to consider them only as the servants of the Physicians, to whom no more was confided than faithfully to make up the medicine ordered by the Doctor; and whose skill was supposed to extend no farther than to an accurate knowledge of the goodness of Drugs: at present the case is reversed; and the Apothecary is so far from being the humble servant of the Physician, that the latter, especially in the early part of life, is obliged to the former for his recommendation and introduction; the Apothecary being, in most families, the first person called upon to visit the sick; and when he does not think proper to take upon himself the entire management of the patient, it is often left to him to determine what Physician is to be sent for. Whether it be owing therefore to custom, or to the high fees demanded in England for the advice of a regular Physician, I will not take upon me to determine; but certain it is, that in by far the greatest number of families, the Apothecary now acts in the three-fold capacity of Physician, Surgeon, and Apothecary; and therefore his employment may not improperly be ranked among the Genteel Professions.

The following article should have stood in the List of Professors of Physic, p. 45. but came to hand too late INGLISH, James. Opposite the New Church in the Strand. This Gentleman is the sole Proprietor of the original Receipt for making the true Scots Pills, invented by Dr. Anderson, Physician to King Charles I. The said Receipt has descended by lineal succession to the present proprietor, and has been in the family ever since the death of Mrs. Catherine Anderson, the inventor's only daughter.

END OF PART I.
